BACKGROUND

Since the last revision of the Master of Social Work (MSW) and the Diploma in Social Work (DSW) curricula in 1984, there have been various developments which necessitate a review of these graduate programs. The focus on globalization, the widening gap between the rich and the poor sectors of society, and the increase in the number of disadvantaged groups pose challenges to social work practice. At the same time, the devolution of basic social services to local government units stresses the importance of practitioners to be able to influence changes in social policy and develop appropriate interventions with various target groups.

In a series of faculty workshops and consultations with practitioners, the Department of Social Work saw the need to redefine the thrust of the current MSW and DSW curricula. While affirming the goal of preparing graduates for leadership in social development work, it sees the need to develop a critical, proactive stance among practitioners who can work towards meaningful changes at various levels. Consistent with proposed global standards for social work education, the Department seeks to develop among practitioners the commitment towards "human rights, social justice, and caring for, and the empowerment of individuals, groups, and communities."*

The goal of the proposed MSW curriculum is to prepare students for leadership in social transformation and human development through policy advocacy and development of innovative practice models. Rather than focusing on areas of specialization, the Department sees the importance of developing among its students the necessary competencies for advocating policy changes and building innovative practice strategies at whatever level or area of practice they may be in, whether micro or macro. This redefined thrust will enable them to hone their knowledge and skills in integrative social work practice which is responsive to changing global and national realities.

Thus, the proposed MSW program will have these basic curricular areas to enable students to have a holistic perspective of social work practice:

- Core courses in social work;
- Social policy advocacy; and,
- Integrative social work models.

The Diploma in Social Work program, which seeks to respond to the demand for higher level competence in direct practice and supervision among practitioners, will essentially follow the thrust of the MSW program.

The proposed revisions will not entail additional faculty items or funding support from the University. They can be implemented within the present capabilities of the Department and of the College.

1. INSTITUTION OF COURSES

1.1 Institution of Required Courses

1.1.1 SW 215. Social Welfare Policy Advocacy. Approaches to and processes in social welfare policy advocacy.

Prerequisite: SW 211

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This course will develop the competencies expected of practitioners who will be assuming leadership positions in advocating for policy and legislative changes in social welfare and development.

To ensure adequate preparation for this course, SW 211 is required.

* Adapted from "Discussion Document on Global Qualifying Standards for Social Work Education and Training, IASSW-IFSW, March 2002.

1.1.2 SW 225. Social Work Practice Models. Integrative, culturally sensitive and transformative social work practice models.

Prerequisite: None

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: In line with a shift in the discipline away from the narrower focus on treatment of dysfunction, this course will introduce students to a range of practice models along a continuum of working with individuals, groups, organizations, and communities.

1.1.3 SW 226. Social Work Interventions. Methods and processes of selected social work interventions.

Prerequisites: SW 201, SW 210, SW 225, SW 290

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This new course will develop the competencies of social work practitioners in helping people at different levels.

The prerequisites will ensure that students will have enough baseline knowledge and skills in the use of differential interventive models.

1.1.4 235. Social Work Education and Training. Perspectives on and skills in popular, participatory, and gender-responsive education for social transformation.

Prerequisites: SW 201, SW 210, SW 225, SW 290

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This proposed new course will develop among students knowledge and skills in grassroots education that is popular, participatory and gender-responsive.

1.1.5 SW 285. Field Instruction 1: Generalist Social Work Practice.

Supervised field placement in a social welfare setting.

Prerequisites: SW 202, SW 220

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This new course is proposed for non-BSSW graduates, in lieu of an undergraduate field instruction course, to equip them with generalist practice skills expected of a social work practitioner, such as engaging client systems in the problem solving process, interviewing/recording, planning and mobilizing community resources.

1.1.6 SW 286. Field Instruction 2: Integrative Social Work Practice.

Application of differential interventive models in a social welfare and development field setting.

Prerequisites: SW 215, SW 226, SW 235

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This course will enable students to integrate knowledge and skills in the use of evidence-based advocacy and other interventive models at various levels of practice in the field.

1.1.7 SW 287. Field Instruction 3: Innovative Interventions in Social Work Practice. Critique of existing models and development of innovative and integrative models in Philippine social work practice.

Prerequisite: SW 286

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: The course will enable students to analyze their field practice experiences and to generate appropriate and workable practice models responsive to current realities.

1.1.8 SW 290. Social Work Research. Research methods and participatory action research for social work practitioners.

Prerequisites: None

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This course will focus on the basic research competencies students are expected to develop for practice effectiveness and program development.

1.2 Institution of Electives

1.2.1 SW 255. Social Work and Migration. Labor migration and its social implications; appropriate social welfare responses at the individual, community, and policy levels.

Prerequisite: None

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This course will enable students to analyze labor migration and its attendant problems towards coming up with appropriate integrative social welfare responses.

1.2.2 SW 256. Women, Gender and Social Work. Gender-sensitive perspectives, approaches, and methodologies in Philippine social work practice w/ particular emphasis on issues v. women.

Prerequisite: None

Credit: 3 u.

Justification: This course will enable students to deepen their awareness of gender dimensions in the analysis of social relations and structures towards developing gender-fair approaches and methods in social work practice. Related to

2. REVISION OF COURSES

2.1 Change in Course Title and Course Description

2.1.1 From: SW 201. Philippine Social Reality. Socio-economic and political structures and processes and their implications to social work.

To: SW 201. Social Work Perspectives. Mainstream and emerging frameworks in social work practice, with emphasis on Philippine practice realities.

Justification: The proposed changes reflect the need to view social work in the context of national and global realities and their implications on mainstream and emerging frameworks for practice. The changes also reflect the coverage of the course as currently taught.

2.1.2 From: SW 210. Social Administration and Development.

Perspectives and approaches in the organization and management of social services.

To: SW 210. Social Work Administration. Perspectives and approaches in the management and operation of groups, people's organizations, social welfare and development agencies.

Justification: The proposed changes broaden the scope of social work administration from a bureaucracy-centered perspective to emerging human service initiatives in the management and operation of social welfare and development organizations.

2.2 Change in Course Title and Addition of Course Description

2.2.1 From: SW 220. Social Work Theory and Practice in the Philippines.

To: SW 220. Generalist Social Work Practice. Basic processes and methods for generalist social work practice in the Philippines.

Justification: This course, which is proposed to be a prerequisite for non-BSSW graduates in lieu of current undergraduate prerequisite courses, will integrate basic social work theory with generalist processes and methods in practice.

2.3 Change in Course Title, Course Description and Addition of Prerequisites

2.3.1 From: SW 211. Social Policy Development. Approaches and techniques in social policy formulation for social development.

Prerequisite: None

To: SW 211. Social Welfare Policy Analysis and Development. Approaches and techniques for policy analysis and formulation in social welfare and social development settings.

Prerequisites: SW 201, SW 210, SW 225, SW 290

Justification: Consistent with the proposed program thrust, the course will focus on the application of techniques for policy analysis and development towards policy advocacy. As such, students taking this course must have completed all core courses.
